DAN SMOOT

RECORD OF THE 90th CONGRESS

The Constitution is an inviolable contract which provides for wide dispersion of political power. Federal power is divided into three branches; and the power of the principal federal branch — the legislative — is further divided into two houses, each able to checkrein the other.

Federal power is limited to what is clearly specified in the Constitution. Any federal action is illegal if not clearly authorized by some grant of power in the Constitution — no matter what the Supreme Court says; no matter how many people want the federal action or how beneficial it may seem. When the federal government does something not authorized by the Constitution, constitutional government is abandoned. There remains no brake on federal power.

If the people want the federal government to do something for which there is no constitutional grant of authority, the people, by due process, should amend the Constitution to give the federal government the additional power they want it to have. If they permit elected and appointed officials to reinterpret or change the Constitution, they open the floodgates to tyranny. Federal power that can be stretched to perform one beneficial act, can be stretched to do a million evil deeds.

The Constitution expressly left with the states (or the people thereof) the latent, undefined powers of government. State governments can legally experiment with social legislation, to meet the changing needs of changing times. If they err — going too far or not far enough in the exercise of their broad powers — the example and competition of other states can induce correction.

The constitutional system — the federated Republic created by the Constitution — was unique in the history of the world. It recognized that, in a civilized society, the primary threat to a man's life, liberty, and property is the government under which he lives. It gave men protection against that threat. It also gave them protection against senseless mob passions. Demagogues could not stampede the people into accepting sudden, unwise changes in their organic law, because the changes had to be made by constitutional amendment; and the prescribed methods of amendment required enough deliberation and delay to give public emotions a chance to cool.

The wide dispersion of political power gave the people protection against power-hungry cabals, parties, conspiracies, and would-be dictators. There was no one lever of power which could control the whole nation.

The old constitutional system never could have been overturned suddenly, but it has been eroded away gradually. Step by step through the years, we have permitted political and economic power to gravitate to the federal government in Washington, there to be concentrated in the executive branch.

Now, one man holds the destiny of the nation in his hands. When his programs fail to produce as promised, he explains the failure by claiming he did not have enough power and money to do what needed doing; and he demands more power and money to enlarge and perpetuate his errors. Congress usually complies.

When a new bill or program is submitted to Congress, members should first ask themselves: does the Constitution authorize it? This primary question is seldom raised in the Congress of the United States. Those who oppose socialist programs sponsored by the administration generally do so on the pragmatic grounds that the programs would not accomplish what the administration promises; and they often support alternative programs which, though not as bad quantitatively, are, in principle, just as illegal as those of the President, because they are not authorized by the Constitution.

Such pragmatic congressional opposition to presidential programs is ineffective, because it often depends on current public opinion. If the President can reach and persuade more people than Congress can, Congress is afraid to offer much resistance because the "people are behind the President" and may defeat recalcitrant members of Congress at the next election. Because of the eminence and prestige of his office, the President can usually sway public opinion more than his congressional opponents can.

Thus, Congress has become a dictator's assembly, rubber-stamping presidential proposals, though sometimes delaying and modifying the proposals enough to make the public feel that Congress is still a legislative body discharging its duty.

In short, we have permitted our Republic to degenerate into a democracy.

It is not too late to restore our Republic; but, as the voting records reported herein reflect, it is late.

We have tabulated the 76 most significant roll-call votes taken in the 90th Congress (48 in the House, 28 in the Senate) during its first session (1967) and during the first quarter of its second session (January-March, 1968).

There is little qualitative difference between a legislator who supports "moderate spending" on unconstitutional programs and one who supports "extravagant spending." They both violate the Constitution. Hence, in deciding whether a congressional vote is "conservative" or "liberal," we have not been guided by questions of economy or party. Our yardstick is the American constitutional principle that the federal government cannot legally do anything not clearly authorized by the Constitution.

A few of the votes tabulated do not involve this constitutional principle. The Senate, for example, acted constitutionally in voting to ratify the Consular Treaty and the Outer Space Treaty. But the record proves that any U.S.-U.S.S.R. treaty affecting the security and defense of the United States will inevitably be harmful to our country. Hence, we recorded every vote for these two treaties as "liberal."

Our tabulations give a dismal picture of Congress. The highest conservative rating in the House was that of James B. Utt of California — 76%. The highest in the Senate was 61% (Strom Thurmond of North Carolina and John Williams of Delaware).

In the past, these men had much higher ratings. Men who formerly had perfect conservative ratings (or ratings in the high 80's and 90's) have dropped, in the 90th Congress, to the 60's and 50's.

This mirrors our relentless drift away from constitutional principles, under pressure of the pervasive "liberal" ideology of the times.

Even our best men in Congress seldom stop to think whether the Constitution authorizes a piece of legislation: they seem to evaluate legislation only on the basis of whether it looks good or feasible, or whether a majority of voters appear to want it.

It is up to us, the voters, to let these men know we expect them to adhere to the Constitution — regardless. It is up to us to replace all of those whose ratings clearly reveal that they are either totally ignorant of, or have utter contempt for, the Constitution which they are sworn to uphold.

Here is Tom Anderson's evaluation of the present Congress:

"The last Congress, before the Kennedy-Johnson Whiz Kids took over, passed bills to spend $83.8 billion of our money . . . . The 'statesmen' comprising the 90th Congress, first session, which adjourned December 15, 1967, passed bills to spend $141.8 billion — a $58 billion increase in one year! A one-year increase that was three times the total federal bonded debt when Herbert Hoover left office! No other American Congress — if this one could be called an 'American' Congress — has ever had such a gift for grab."

My own evaluation is harsher. Buying votes with promises of handouts from the public treasury; plundering the public for political gain; kowtowing to union bosses to get the labor vote; playing politics with a war that is consuming the lives of our soldiers; bidding for the Negro vote by catering to racial agitators whose plans for violence against whites this summer surpass anything yet seen — these practices characterize the Johnson administration and the leaderhip of the 90th Congress.

There is more than a little indication that the war crisis, the racial crisis, and the economic crisis — which government has caused — will be used by the administration as a pretext for clamping total police state controls on the people of the United States before the end of 1968. On its record, the 90th Congress can be expected to acquiesce supinely.

The proudest boast of a liberal Representative or Senator is that he got huge quantities of "federal money" for his state or district.

We need statesmen in Congress, not panhandlers. We need men who will devote their energies to restoring and defending the American constitutional system — so that the people (by private effort or through their state and local governments) can solve their own problems, free of plunder and harassment by the federal government.

THE ISSUES

VIETNAM WAR: In March, 1967, U. S. Representative George E. Brown, Jr., (California Democrat), tried to amend a Vietnam war authorization bill (HR 4515) by providing that funds could not be used for military operations against the communist enemy in or above North Vietnam. On March 2, the House rejected the Brown proposal. The vote is tabulated in Column 1, C indicating a conservative stand against.

EMERGENCY FOOD FOR INDIA: When the year 1967 began, the President and Congress had already committed the U.S. to give India 3.6 million tons of food grain during the year (estimated value: $227.9 million). But on February 2, 1967, President Johnson asked Congress to approve an additional, emergency gift. On March 9, 1967, the House passed H J Res 267, recommending that the U. S. give India an additional 3 million tons of food grain in 1967 ($190 million). H J Res 267 also recommended an additional $25 million (of tax money) for distribution of food to India through CARE and other American voluntary agencies. The roll-call vote on H J Res 267 is tabulated in Column 2, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed H J Res 267 by voice vote on March 16, 1967.

INTEREST EQUALIZATION TAX: In July, 1963, President Kennedy asked Congress to pass an "Interest Equalization Tax." Americans who bought foreign securities (stocks or bonds) would pay the tax and then pass the cost of the tax on to foreign businessmen. This was intended to make it as expensive for foreigners to finance their enterprises with American money as with European money. The purpose was to stop the outflow of money from the U.S. — and, thus, to decrease our balance-of-payments deficit and stop the drain on our monetary gold reserve. Congress refused to authorize the tax for Kennedy. In 1964, Congress passed the law (PL 88-563) for Johnson, making it retroactive to the July, 1963, date when Kennedy had originally proposed it. The law remained in effect until December 31, 1965. Congress extended it to July 31, 1967.

In 1967, Johnson asked Congress to extend the Interest Equalization Tax for another two years, and to give him discretionary power to vary the tax on lending to foreigners (to eliminate the tax or raise it by 100%), as he might deem necessary to juggle the balance-of-payments situation. On March 15, the House passed the Interest Equalization Tax Extension, giving the President latitude to juggle the tax by 50% rather than by 100% as he had requested. The vote is tabulated in Column 3, C indicating a conservative stand against. The Senate passed the bill by voice vote on July 25.

The Constitution does not authorize Congress to delegate its taxing power to the President, as it did in this bill. The bill did not accomplish its stated purpose. This is proven by the fact that our balance-of-payments deficit grew worse after the bill was passed.

U.S.-U.S.S.R. CONSULAR TREATY: On March 16, 1967, the Senate passed a resolution consenting to ratification of a consular treaty between the U.S. and the Soviet Union. The vote is tabulated in Column 49, C indicating a conservative stand against.

AID TO LATIN AMERICA: On March 22, 1967, the House passed H J Res 428, supporting increased U. S. aid to the Latin American Alliance for Progress, and resolving to give full consideration to providing, through the Inter-American Development Bank, tax money (on a matching basis with Latin American countries) to help finance the establishment of a Latin American common market. The vote is tabulated in Column 4, C indicating a conservative stand against. The Senate refused to act on a similar resolution.

NATIONAL SCIENCE FOUNDATION: On April 12, 1967, the House passed HR 5404, amending the National Science Foundation Act of 1950, to enlarge the Foundation's powers — authorizing it to support applied as well as basic research, and to support research in the social as well as in the physical sciences. The vote is tabulated in Column 5, C indicating a conservative stand against. A Senate subcommittee held hearings on HR 5404 and on a similar Senate Bill (S 2598), but no further Senate action was taken.

NUCLEAR DESALTING PLANT: On April 20, 1967, the House passed HR 207, authorizing a $57.2 million appropriation for the Interior Department to assist in the development of a nuclear power and desalting plant in Southern California. The total cost of the project was to be $444.3 million. It was to be built in cooperation with the Atomic Energy Commission, the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, and three California power utilities. The vote on this bill is tabulated in Column 6, C indicating a conservative stand against. The Senate passed this bill (as S 270) by voice vote on February 6. On May 8, the Senate by voice vote and without debate accepted minor House amendments and cleared the bill for the President's signature.

OUTER SPACE TREATY: On April 25, 1967, the Senate passed a resolution consenting to ratification of the Treaty on Peaceful Use of Outer Space. Though a multilateral agreement, the Outer Space Treaty was essentially an agreement between the U.S. and the U.S.S.R. The vote is tabulated in Column 50, all stands for the Treaty being designated "liberal."

APPALACHIA: On April 27, 1967, the Senate passed S 602, extending and revising the Appalachian Regional Development Act, authorizing over $990 million in new welfare and highway funds. As originally authorized in 1965, this program, under the guise of fighting poverty in Appalachia, gave the President tax money to dominate the economy and local governments in all of West Virginia and in portions of Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. S 602 added 18 Mississippi counties, 2 Alabama counties, and 1 New York county to the program. S 602 also amended the Public Works and Economic Development Act of 1965, authorizing an additional $75 million for 5 separate regional commissions.

The House passed S 602 on September 14, 1967, reducing the authorization by some $100 million.

The Senate vote is tabulated in Column 51, the House vote in Column 7, C indicating a conservative stand against.

As approved in conference, passed by voice votes in both House and Senate, and signed into law (PL 90-103), the bill authorized $886.7 million for Appalachian development programs.

RENT SUPPLEMENTS, MODEL CITIES, URBAN RENEWAL: As passed by both houses of Congress and signed into law (PL 90-121) on November 3, 1967, HR 9960 was an appropriations bill which provided $10.1 billion — $532 million for the General Services Administration; $495 million for the National Science Foundation; $6.6 billion for the Veterans Administration; $1.9 billion for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, the remainder for various executive offices, independent agencies, commissions, and so on. The portion of the bill dealing with the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) caused some controversy.

On May 17, 1967, the House adopted an amendment deleting from HR 9960 funds for rent supplements. This vote is tabulated in Column 8, C indicating a conservative stand for the amendment (against rent supplements).

PRODUCED BY UNZ.ORG

On May 17, the House passed HR 9960, appropriating $10 billion — of which $1.8 billion was for HUD. This House appropriation for HUD included $237 million for model cities, nothing for rent supplements. This vote is tabulated in Column 9, C indicating a conservative stand against HR 9960, which contained billions for unconstitutional spending, even though rent supplements had been eliminated.

On September 21, 1967, the Senate passed HR 9960, increasing HUD appropriations to $2.2 billion — of which $40 million was for rent supplements, $537 million for model cities. This vote is tabulated in Column 52, C indicating a conservative stand against the bill.

On October 24, 1967, the House rejected a motion (by Representative Sidney Yates) to accept the $40 million rent-supplements provision which the Senate had written into HR 9960. Vote on the Yates amendment is tabulated in Column 45, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On October 26, 1967, the House reversed itself with regard to rent supplements. On that day, the House rejected a motion (by Representative Paul Fino) to exclude rent supplements from the final bill. Vote on the Fino amendment is tabulated in Column 10, C indicating a conservative stand for.

On October 26, the House passed the conference version of HR 9960. The vote is tabulated in Column 46, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed the conference version by voice vote.

As finally passed, HR 9960 authorized $1.9 billion for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, including $312 million for model cities, $5 million for rent supplements.

ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOLS: On May 25, 1967, the House passed HR 7819, authorizing $3.4 billion in aid to state elementary and secondary schools for fiscal 1969. The vote is tabulated in Column 11, C indicating a conservative stand against federal aid to education.

On December 11, 1967, the Senate passed HR 7819, extending the Elementary and Secondary Education Act through fiscal 1971, authorizing expenditures (through the 1971 fiscal year) totaling $14.5 billion. The vote is tabulated in Column 53, C indicating a conservative stand against.

As agreed to by Senate-House Conference on December 15, 1967, passed by both houses, and signed into law (PL 90-247) on January 2, 1968, HR 7819 extended the Elementary and Secondary Education Act through fiscal 1970, authorizing expenditures totaling $13.3 billion, the largest federal-aid-to-education bill ever passed — all of it unconstitutional and, therefore, illegal, because the Constitution grants the federal government no authority to subsidize education.

AGRICULTURE: On June 6, 1967, the House passed HR 10509, appropriating $4.7 billion for the Department of Agriculture and related agencies, for the farm price support program (Commodity Credit Corporation), crop insurance, foreign assistance, special milk program, school lunch program, food stamp program, rural electrification, and so on. The vote is tabulated in Column 12, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On July 13, the Senate passed HR 10509, appropriating $6.7 billion for the Department of Agriculture and related agencies. This vote is tabulated in Column 54, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On October 10, 1967, both houses adopted a conference report which appropriated $4.9 billion. This was $200 million more than the House had originally approved, $1.8 billion less than the Senate had originally approved. It was $68 million below the President's budget requests, $2 billion below appropriations for the previous year.

FOOD STAMP PROGRAM: Under the Food Stamp Program, poor families buy, from the federal government, coupons which they can use at grocery stores for the purchase of food. The coupons have a purchasing value much greater than their cost to the poor. The average family in the food stamp program pays about 64% of the value of the coupons it receives. The remaining 36% represents a food subsidy for the poor, paid for by taxpayers.

Though probably well-intentioned, the Food Stamp Program is illegal, because the Constitution does not grant the federal government authority to take money from some to buy food for others.

The program was initiated in 1961 as an experiment. In 1964, Congress gave it a 3-year authorization. In 1967, Johnson asked Congress to make it permanent.

On May 31, 1967, the Senate passed (voice vote) S 953, extending the Food Stamp Program for another 3 years, authorizing a $200 million appropriation in fiscal 1968, $225 million in fiscal 1969, $250 million in fiscal 1970.

On June 8, 1967, the House passed HR 1318, authorizing a $195 million appropriation for fiscal 1968 only. This vote is tabulated in Column 13, C indicating a conservative stand against.

As combined into one bill, approved by both houses, and signed into law by the President (PL 90-91, September 27, 1967) S 953 and HR 1318 extended the Food Stamp Program 2 years, authorizing $200 million for fiscal 1968, $225 million for fiscal 1969.

OLDER AMERICANS ACT: On June 19, 1967, the House passed HR 10730, extending for one year the Older Americans Act of 1965, authorizing through fiscal 1968 $16.9 million in grants to states and public and private non-profit organizations for the care, recreation, and rehabilitation of the elderly. The vote is tabulated in Column 14, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On June 28, the Senate passed HR 10730, extending the Act for 5 years, authorizing appropriations of $16.9 million in fiscal 1968, $26 million for fiscal 1969. This vote is tabulated in Column 55, L indicating a liberal stand for.

The House accepted the Senate version; and the bill was signed as PL 90-42 on July 3, 1967.

TEACHERS CORPS: On June 27, 1967, the House passed HR 10943, freeing $3.8 million in frozen funds for training volunteer teachers and paying Teacher Corps salaries for the summer of 1967. The bill authorized new appropriations of $570 million for operation of the Teacher Corps during fiscal years 1968-70. This includes funds for university graduate school facilities, aid to state and local education agencies and programs, graduate fellowships and training for some 100,000 student teachers, and subsidies to pay the salaries of some 9500 volunteer teachers and teacher interns in elementary and secondary schools. The vote is tabulated in Column 15, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed this bill by voice vote on June 28, 1967.

SPACE PROGRAM: On June 28, the House passed HR 10340, authorizing $4.7 billion for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA). The vote is tabulated in Column 16, C indicating a conservative stand against. The Senate passed an authorization bill for NASA (S 1296, $4.8 billion) by voice vote.

On August 22, the House passed HR 12474, appropriating $4.5 billion for NASA. This vote is tabulated in Column 17, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On October 6, the Senate passed HR 12474, appropriating $4.6 billion for NASA. The vote is tabulated in Column 56, C indicating a conservative stand against.

As agreed to by both houses and signed into law by the President, HR 12474 appropriated $4.588 billion for NASA.

CIVIL RIGHTS COMMISSION: On July 11, 1967, the House passed HR 10805, extending the Civil Rights Commission through January 31, 1973, approving $2.6 million for the agency in fiscal 1968. The Commission was originally created, as a "temporary" agency, by the Civil Rights Act of 1957. This vote is tabulated in Column 18, C indicating a conservative stand against extending the Civil Rights Commission.

The Senate passed this bill by voice vote on November 1.

TRUTH IN LENDING: On July 11, 1967, the Senate passed S 5, a truth-in-lending bill requiring creditors to inform customers of all taxes, fees, and insurance charges involved in the cost of loans, plus notice of the loan cost expressed in terms of an approximate annual percentage rate and in actual dollars-and-cents amounts. The bill provided stiff criminal penalties. This vote is tabulated in Column 57, L indicating a liberal stand for.

On February 1, 1968, the House passed an amendment (introduced by Representative Richard H. Poff) to HR 11601, the House truth-in-lending bill. The Poff amendment makes it a federal crime (with a $10,000 penalty) to lend money at rates prohibited by state usury laws. This vote is tabulated in Column 41, L indicating a liberal stand for.

On February 1, the House passed HR 11601, broadening the scope of S 5 passed by the Senate in 1967. The House bill restricts the garnishment of wages; creates a National Commission on Consumer Finance; gives the Federal Trade Commission responsibility for general enforcement. This vote is tabulated in Column 42, L indicating a liberal stand for.

As this goes to press, HR 11601 is still pending in the Senate. S 5, passed by the Senate in 1967 but not acted on by the House, appears to have been discarded.

The enactment and enforcement of usury and disclosure laws are strictly state and local matters, over which the federal government has no constitutional authority.

AIR QUALITY ACT: On July 18, 1967, the Senate passed S 780, the Air Quality Act of 1967. This act decrees that only federal officials can henceforth set car exhaust standards. The bill authorized the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to establish "air criteria and recommended control measures," empowering him to set air-quality standards for all states that do not abide by the Secretary's "criteria." The bill authorized $700 million for grants-in-aid and enforcement. The vote is tabulated in Column 58, L indicating a liberal stand for.

On November 2, 1967, the House passed S 780, authorizing $428.3 million over 3 years to combat air pollution, and authorizing the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to go to court to stop air pollution when he considers the public health endangered. The House bill permits California to enforce stricter auto exhaust standards than the federal government approves for all other states. The vote is tabulated in Column 19, L indicating a liberal stand for.

Of the $428.3 million authorized in the House bill, $140 million was reauthorization of funds that had been originally authorized by PL 89-675 in 1966; $288.3 million was for new authorization. The Senate accepted the $428.3 million House authorization, and S 780 was signed into law on November 21, 1967.

Establishing and enforcing air-pollution standards are strictly state and local functions, over which the federal government has no constitutional authority.

SOCIALIZED ELECTRICAL POWER: On July 25, 1967, the House passed an amendment to HR 11641, a general public works appropriations bill. The amendment, proposed by Representative Robert Giaimo, deleted $1.6 million in planning funds proposed for the $227 million Dickey-Lincoln School Dam project, to be built on the St. John River, in Maine, by the Army Engineers and administered by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior. The project is intended to serve the Interior Department's planned New England extra high-voltage power grid system. The vote is tabulated in Column 20, C indicating a conservative stand for the Giaimo amendment.

On October 10, the Senate passed HR 11641, appropriating $4.7 billion for public works, including the Dickey-Lincoln School Dam project. The vote is tabulated in Column 59, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The House restored $875 million for the Dickey-Lincoln School Dam project, and other adjustments made the Senate and House versions identical. The President signed HR 11641 into law, appropriating $4.7 billion.

INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK: On July 26, 1967, the House passed HR 9547, authorizing the U.S. government to contribute an additional $900 million to the Inter-American Development Bank's Fund for Special Operations. The Bank uses this tax money for loans on "soft" terms for risks that no commercial bank would accept. Proponents of the Bank say that such high-risk loans are "necessary to meet the aims of the Alliance for Progress." The vote is tabulated in Column 21, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On August 24, the Senate passed HR 9547. The vote is tabulated in Column 60, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The President signed the bill into law on September 22, 1967.

LABOR AND WELFARE: On August 2, 1967, the Senate passed HR 10196, appropriating $13.4 billion for federal welfare, including funds for the Department of Labor ($625 million), Health, Education and Welfare ($12 billion), related agencies, and "indefinite appropriations." The vote is tabulated in Column 61, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The House passed this bill by voice vote. The President signed it into law on November 8, 1967.

LAW ENFORCEMENT AND CRIMINAL JUSTICE ASSISTANCE ACT: In 1967, President Johnson proposed a Safe Streets and Crime Control Act to provide $50 million to help states and communities improve law enforcement. The President's bill would have given the U.S. Attorney General authority to make grants-in-aid directly to police departments. Hence, the Attorney General would soon have controlled the departments.

The House changed the name of the bill to Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice Assistance Act, and rewrote it to add $25 million for local law enforcement agencies to use in controlling and preventing riots, specifying that priority for programs under the bill should be given to antiriot measures. The House provided that most of the $75 million authorized would be made in grants to states, which would control distribution of the money to local law enforcement agencies.

This took away from the Attorney General much of the control that Johnson's bill would have given him, but not all.

The House passed the Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice Act (HR 5037) on August 8, 1967. In addition to authorizing $75 million in federal subsidies for state and local law enforcement, the bill created a National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice to provide police research and training for local law enforcement officers. It empowers the U.S. Attorney General to circumvent state governments and grant funds directly to local law enforcement agencies which have submitted plans pleasing to the Attorney General — if state governments do not act quickly enough to please the federal official, in requesting planning grants and in submitting law-enforcement innovation plans that the federal official likes. The vote is tabulated in Column 22, L indicating a liberal stand for.

The Senate did not vote on this bill in 1967.

SCENIC RIVERS: On August 8, 1967, the Senate passed S 119, establishing a National Wild Life and Scenic Rivers System, to include all rivers, or parts thereof, designated by Congress now or in the future. The Act empowers the Secretary of the Interior to incorporate into the system, as he pleases, river systems administered by state or local governments. The Secretary is empowered to condemn private property which he wants included, and to control all human activity within the Wild Life and Scenic Rivers System. The vote is tabulated in Column 62, L indicating a liberal stand for.

The House took no action on this bill in 1967.

CIVIL RIGHTS: On August 16, 1967, the House passed HR 2516 making it a federal crime to injure, intimidate, or interfere with anyone (because of race, color, religion, political affiliation, or national origin) because of his participation in a publicly-administered program; because of his applying for a job, working, or joining a union; because of his using any vehicle or common carrier; because of his participating in any federally-aided activity; because of his using the goods or services of any public accommodation. The law would invalidate any applicable state laws, at the discretion of federal officials. The vote is tabulated in Column 23, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed HR 2516 on March 11, 1968, after adding anti-riot and open-housing provisions to the House-passed version. The Senate-passed bill outlaws interstate travel or use of interstate broadcast facilities with intent to start a riot. It prohibits discrimination (as interpreted by federal officials) in the rental or sale of housing, including the rental or sale (through real estate brokers) of single-family homes after January 1, 1970. The vote is tabulated in Column 76, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate-passed version of HR 2516 presently awaits action in the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY: In 1967, President Johnson asked Congress to legislate a 15% across-the-board increase in social security benefits, to be financed by higher payroll taxes and an increase in the amount of earnings subject to the tax — that is, an increase in the tax base from the maximum of $6600 to $10,800. The President asked for expansion of medicare to cover 1.5 million disabled persons under 65; proposed that each state welfare department be required to increase cash payments to aged welfare recipients to the level the state had set as the minimum for subsistence; and asked that taxes be reduced for some 3 million older Americans, eliminated altogether for about 500,000 — the tax reductions to be offset by tax increases on elderly persons in upper income brackets. The first-year cost of the President's proposals was estimated at $4.4 billion.

On August 17, 1967, the House passed HR 12080, authorizing a 12.5% across-the-board increase in social security benefits, to be financed by higher payroll taxes and by raising the tax base to $7600. The House bill did not expand medicare to cover the disabled under 65, did not provide new tax treatment for the elderly, and did not contain provisions requiring state welfare departments to change their scales of payment.

The House bill did require states to set up work-training programs for all unemployed adults and older children receiving federal aid to families with dependent chidren (AFDC); and required states to establish day-care centers for children of AFDC mothers, stipulating that the mothers could not continue to receive welfare checks unless they went to work or took job training. The federal government will finance 75% of the cost of the work-training programs and day-care centers. The House bill fixed limits on federal aid to states for AFDC payments, the limits related to amounts states had previously been receiving from the federal government. The bill required reductions in federal aid to states for medicaid. The first-year cost of the House-passed bill was $3.4 billion.

Some liberals condemned restrictions in the House bill as "a return to the poor laws of centuries gone by." Representative Wilbur D. Mills defended the House-bill restrictions by saying: "What in the world is wrong with requiring these people to submit themselves, if they are to draw public funds, to a test of their ability to learn a job"?

The roll-call vote on initial passage of HR 12080 is recorded in Column 24, C indicating a conservative stand against.

Heretofore, the social security law permitted states to withhold AFDC payments from a mother with dependent children if she lived with the father of her children, even though the father was unemployed. On November 20, 1967, the Senate amended HR 12080 requiring states to give AFDC payments to a mother living with the unemployed father of her dependent children. This vote is tabulated in Column 63, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On November 21, the Senate amended HR 12080 to provide for establishment of a new $60 million program of federal aid to states for helping foster children. The vote is tabulated in Column 64, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On November 22, the Senate passed HR 12080, providing a 15% across-the-board increase in social security benefits, eliminating some of the House restrictions on welfare payments, watering down others, and generally "liberalizing" the House bill.

The first-year cost of the Senate bill was $7 billion — $2.6 billion above what the President had requested, $3.6 billion above what the House version had provided. This vote is tabulated in Column 65, C indicating a conservative stand against.

As agreed upon in conference, passed by both Houses, and sent to the President for signing into law, HR 12080 had an estimated first-year cost of $3.7 billion.

The bill that became law gave a 13% across-the-board increase in social security benefits, increased (from $35 to $40 a month for single persons; from $52.50 a month to $60 for a married couple) special benefits to persons 72 and over. The law allowed social security beneficiaries to earn $1680 a year without loss of benefits (instead of the $1500-a-year previous limit); provided cash benefits for disabled widows or widows between the ages of 50 and 62; liberalized the definition of blindness for purposes of receiving disability benefits; increased benefits for certain children; provided cash benefits for certain covered workers under 31 who become disabled; liberalized provisions governing payment of medicare bills, eligibility for medicare, hospital time covered by medicare.

The final bill retained most of the restrictions on welfare payments written into the original House bill. It raised the social security tax base from $6600 to $7800, and raised the payroll tax from 8.8% of payroll to 11.8% — the rise to begin in 1969 and reach its peak in 1987.

FOREIGN AID AUTHORIZATION: On August 17, 1967, the Senate passed S 1872, authorizing new foreign aid funds of more than $2.6 billion for the next fiscal year. This was the lowest foreign-aid authorization since the program began. One reason it was low was that money which formerly would have been counted as foreign aid was this year handled as part of the U.S. defense budget — to wit, funds for Vietnam, Laos, Thailand; and $60 million for a new NATO headquarters (necessary because DeGaulle ran NATO out of France). The vote is tabulated in Column 66, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On August 25, the House passed HR 12048, authorizing new foreign aid funds of more than $2.8 billion. Before passing the bill, the House adopted an amendment (proposed by Representative Paul Findley) prohibiting the government from granting "most favored nation" tariff privilege to communist Poland until it could be determined that Poland was no longer supplying war material to our enemy in North Vietnam. The vote on passage of HR 12048 is tabulated in Column 25, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On November 8 (when debating the Senate foreign-aid authorization bill — S 1872), the House rejected an amendment (proposed by Representative H. R. Gross) which would have prohibited the President from giving aid to (or trading in defense goods with) nations trading with our enemies in North Vietnam. The vote which rejected the Gross amendment also rejected the Findley amendment prohibiting "most favored nation" tariff treatment for communist Poland. The vote is tabulated in Column 26, C indicating a conservative stand for the Gross-Findley amendments.

On November 8, both Houses of Congress accepted a conference version of S 1872, authorizing $2.6 billion for foreign aid in fiscal 1968 — $787.6 million less than the President had requested.

FOREIGN AID APPROPRIATION: On November 17, the House passed HR 13893, appropriating $2.775 billion for foreign aid in fiscal 1968. The vote is tabulated in Column 27, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On December 7, the Senate passed HR 13893, appropriating $3.308 billion. The vote is tabulated in Column 67, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On December 15, House and Senate, by voice votes, passed the final conference version of HR 13893, appropriating $2.295 billion for foreign aid. The bill carried an additional $580.956 million in appropriations for related foreign activities, such as $107.5 million for the Peace Corps, $300 million for the Inter-American Development Bank, $104 million for the International Development Association.

AID TO HANDICAPPED CIVILIANS: On August 21, 1967, the House passed HR 12257, authorizing $1.1 billion in grants to states to pay 75% of the cost of various rehabilitation programs for handicapped civilians; establishing a National Center for Deaf-Blind Youths; authorizing a new program of federal grants to states to pay up to 90% of the cost of vocational rehabilitation services to handicapped migratory farm workers and their families, if the state provides these vocational rehabilitation services without regard to how long the recipients have lived in the state. The vote is tabulated in Column 28, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On September 20, the Senate, by voice vote, passed the House version of HR 12257. On October 3, the President signed the bill into law (PL 90-99).

THURGOOD MARSHALL NOMINATION: On August 30, 1967, the Senate confirmed the nomination of Negro NAACP attorney Thurgood Marshall as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Marshall has been listed as a member of communist-front organizations; and he helped lobby through the Supreme Court the 1954 Brown vs. School Board decision (which established the doctrine that the Court can do anything it pleases, without regard to the Constitution or judicial precendents). Thurgood Marshall has made clear his totalitarian racist sentiments by making such remarks as: "I want you to understand that when us colored folks take over, every time a white man draws a breath, he'll have to pay a fine."

The vote is tabulated in Column 68, C indicating a conservative stand against the nomination of Thurgood Marshall.

BENEFITS FOR LOCAL POLICE OFFICERS: On September 11, 1967, the House passed HR 11816, providing, for local and state police officers, disability and death benefits equivalent to those provided federal employees — if, in the judgment of the U.S. Attorney General, the local officers are injured or killed while attempting to arrest a person guilty of violating federal law. The vote is tabulated in Column 29, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On September 14, 1967, the Senate passed HR 11816 by voice vote, adding minor amendments to the House version. The bill, in conference, has not been cleared for final passage by both Houses.

HEALTH AND RAT CONTROL: On September 20, 1967, the House passed HR 6418, authorizing over $1 billion in grants to states for physical and mental health services, research, and development. The bill empowered the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to set clinical product and professional quality standards and to grant (or not grant) business licenses to laboratories dealing in interstate shipment of specimens.

The HEW secretary was also empowered to make agreements with health schools, hospitals, and other medical training facilities for the "interchange and cooperative use" of personnel, facilities, services, and equipment.

Before passing HR 6418, the House added an amendment making $40 million available to the HEW secretary to give to states, communities, or private agencies for rat-control projects pleasing to the secretary. The House had previously rejected an administration bill to provide $40 million for rat control. The vote on passage of HR 6418 is tabulated in Column 30, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On November 6, 1967, the Senate passed HR 6418 by voice vote, retaining the essential provisions of the House-passed version, but deleting fiscal 1971 authorization of funds.

On November 21, the House and Senate adopted a conference report (similar to the previous versions of the bill, above) with little debate. The President signed the bill into law (PL 90-174) on December 5, 1967.

AID FOR MENTAL RETARDATION FACILITIES: On September 20, 1967, the House passed HR 6430, authorizing $216.8 million for construction and staffing of certain mental retardation facilities. The vote is tabulated in Column 31, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On November 6, 1967, the Senate, by voice vote, passed a version of HR 6430 which included a new $10 million authorization providing training and research in physical education for mentally retarded and other handicapped children.

On November 21, 1967, House and Senate, by voice votes, passed the bill's conference report (including the Senate's physical education provision). The President signed the bill into law (PL 90-170) December 4, 1967.

EDUCATIONAL TV: On September 21, 1967, the House passed HR 6736, authorizing $38 million for construction of noncommercial educational radio and television broadcasting facilities. The bill established a federal Corporation for Public Broadcasting and granted it $9 million to subsidize the production of "educational" and "cultural" broadcasts pleasing to government officials. The bill prohibits noncommercial educational broadcast stations from editorializing or supporting or opposing a candidate for political office. It also authorized the HEW secretary to spend $500 thousand on a study to determine whether the federal government should subsidize "instructional" television (that is, classroom tv). The vote is tabulated in Column 32, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed its version of this bill (S 1160) by voice vote on May 17. Both Houses passed the final bill by voice votes. The President signed the bill into law (PL 90-129) on November 7, 1967.

POVERTY WAR: On October 5, 1967, the Senate passed S 2388, authorizing $2.258 billion for the Office of Economic Opportunity's various poverty war programs. This authorization was $198 million more than President Johnson had requested. The vote is tabulated in Column 69, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On November 15, the House passed S 2388, authorizing $1.6 billion — $658 million below the Senate authorization, $460 million below the President's request.

The House bill included provisions denying poverty funds to any person convicted of inciting a riot; prohibiting communists from administering work-training programs; prohibiting anti-poverty workers from engaging in political activity or participating in picketing, protests, demonstrations, and riots; barring the use of Legal Services funds for the defense of persons who help organize civil disturbances. At Washington OEO headquarters, there are 49 poverty war officials in "super-grade" pay status, which means they draw salaries ranging from $19 thousand to $30 thousand. The OEO director also hires experts and consultants whose pay ranges from $50 to $100 a day. The House-passed bill included provisions limiting the number of super-grade poverty-war officials, abolishing the OEO director's power to hire experts and consultants.

The vote on first House passage of S 2388 is tabulated in Column 35, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate-House conference version of S 2388 weakened or eliminated most of the reform provisions which the House had included to make poverty-war programs less objectionable to the public. The conference bill, which became law, emasculated the House anti-riot amendments; made it possible for past members of the communist party to administer work-training programs; eliminated House provisions against OEO hiring of experts, consultants, and super-grade employees.

On December 8, 1967, the Senate passed the conference version of S 2388. The vote is tabulated in Column 70, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On December 11, the House passed the conference bill. This vote is tabulated in Column 36, C indicating a conservative stand against.

As finally passed, S 2388 authorized $1.98 billion for the Office of Economic Opportunity during fiscal year 1968; $2.18 billion for fiscal year 1969. The President had requested $2.06 billion for fiscal 1968.

AID FOR SUPERSONIC PLANE: On October 5, 1967, the Senate, debating the Transportation Department Appropriations Bill (HR 11456), rejected an amendment to reduce (from $142 million to $1 million) funds for development of a supersonic transport plane. The vote is tabulated in Column 71, C indicating a conservative stand for the defeated amendment.

MEAT INSPECTION: On October 31, 1967, the House passed HR 12144, increasing federal authority over inspection of meat involved in interstate commerce. It authorized the federal government to pay up to 50% of the administrative costs of state inspection of meat involved only in intrastate commerce — requiring, however, that state officials follow federal inspection regulations. The vote is tabulated in Column 33, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On November 28, the Senate passed HR 12144, adding a provision requiring states to start meat inspection programs "at least equal" to federal requirements. The Senate version authorized the U.S. Secretary of Agriculture to inspect, within 2 years, all meat plants doing business outside their state, if their state had not established and enforced a meat inspection program meeting federal standards. The Senate version authorized the Secretary of Agriculture to require federal inspection of all meat plants engaged only in intrastate commerce, if the Secretary thinks the plants are producing meat dangerous to public health and if state officials fail to remedy the situation after notification from the Secretary. The vote is tabulated in Column 72, C indicating a conservative stand against.

On December 6, 1967, the House and Senate passed a conference report, retaining the Senate's major provisions strengthening federal control over the meat industry. The President signed the bill into law (PL 90-201) December 15, 1967.

REDWOOD NATIONAL PARK: On November 1, 1967, the Senate passed S 2515, establishing a $100 million, 61,654-acre Redwood National Park to extend across 2 northern California counties and absorb 3 state parks. The bill authorized federal officials to trade government land in another area (described as "permanently held" by the government in previous legislation) for private property which the federal government confiscates within the Redwood Park. The vote is tabulated in Column 73, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The bill remains under consideration in the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON PRODUCT SAFETY: On November 6, 1967, the House passed S J Res 33, establishing a National Commission on Product Safety, to be composed of 7 members, appointed by the President. The Resolution authorized a $2 million appropriation for the new Commission. The Commission will identify categories of household products which it thinks present unreasonable hazards to customers; will evaluate existing state and federal laws concerning such products; and will, after 2 years, recommend new laws based on its findings. The vote is tabulated in Column 34, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed S J Res 33 by voice vote on June 6, 1967. As the House-passed version differed only slightly from its version, the Senate (November 7, 1967) accepted the House version by voice vote, without debate, and sent it to the President who signed it into law (PL 90-146) November 20, 1967.

INTERGOVERNMENTAL PERSONNEL: On November 7, 1967, the Senate passed S 699, authorizing $90 million in federal grants to pay up to 50% of the costs of local and state programs designed to "strengthen" government personnel administration — provided the state and local governments meet federal merit-system principles. The bill permits local and state government personnel to attend federal training programs; authorizes exchanges (for periods up to 2 years) of federal and state employees performing similar work. The vote is tabulated in Column 74, C indicating a conservative stand against.

GAS PIPELINE SAFETY: On November 9, 1967, the Senate passed S 1166, empowering the U. S. Transportation Secretary to establish and enforce safety standards for pipelines used to transport hazardous gas. The bill specified fines up to $400 thousand for noncompliance, and empowered the Transportation Secretary to exact an annual fee from all persons transporting gas — the size of the fee to be determined by the Secretary. The bill authorized $38 million for the Secretary to administer this pipeline-safety program (in addition to the fees he is authorized to collect).

This bill would give the Secretary of Transportation dictatorial powers to control the design, installation, construction, initial inspection, testing, replacement, and maintenance of all pipelines, rights-of-way, equipment, facilities, and buildings used in the transportation of gas. The vote is tabulated in Column 75, L indicating a liberal stand for.

The House has taken no action on the bill.

PEACE CORPS: In 1967, there was considerable congressional criticism of the Peace Corps because the Corps director, complaining about the drafting of his corpsmen for military service, boasted that, in the future, he would help his corpsmen get draft deferments. Congressmen criticized the Peace Corps because there was one high-salaried bureaucrat for every 48 volunteers; and because of the high ratio of Peace Corpsmen to native population (1 corpsman for every 150 natives) in certain Pacific islands.

Nonetheless, the House, on November 21, passed S 1031, authorizing $115.7 million for the Peace Corps in fiscal 1968 — $5.7 million more than authorized for fiscal 1967. The vote is tabulated in Column 37, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed a similar version of S 1031 by voice vote on May 15, 1967. The President signed the bill into law (PL 90-175) December 5, 1967.

FLAMMABLE FABRICS: On November 27, 1967, the House passed S 1003, authorizing the U. S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to conduct a government research and development program on wearing apparel and household-furnishing fabrics. The bill authorized $6 million for the program through 1970, and created a nine-member National Advisory Committee for Flammable Fabrics. The Secretary of Commerce must consult with this Committee before he can issue flammability standards for fabric manufacturers, and before he lists fabrics which do not meet his approval. The bill authorized the Federal Trade Commission to supervise record-keeping within the textile industry, and to punish businessmen who displease government officials by deviating from the Trade Commission's interpretation of government rules and regulations. The vote is tabulated in Column 38, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed a similar version of S 1003 by voice vote on July 27, 1967. On December 1, 1967, the Senate agreed by voice vote to minor House changes and sent the bill to the President who signed it into law (PL 90-189) December 14, 1967

AID TO ADULT EDUCATION: On December 4, 1967, the House passed the Adult Education Amendments Act of 1967 (HR 11276), authorizing $60 million for adult education in fiscal 1969 (setting no expenditure limit for fiscal 1970). The bill extends through 1970 federal programs of grants to states for educating 24 million illiterate and "undereducated" adults. The vote is tabulated in Column 39, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate has taken no action on the bill.

FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICES: On December 4, 1967, the House passed HR 13054, prohibiting employers, employment agencies, and labor unions from engaging in discriminatory practices, on the basis of age, against persons between the ages of 40 and 65. The employers and labor unions covered are all that have 50 employees or members before June 30, 1968; 25 employees or members after that date. The bill prohibited advertisements which state an age preference; authorized the U.S. Secretary of Labor to conduct a propaganda program to reduce "the barriers to employment" for older workers; and authorized $3 million for the over-all program annually. The vote is tabulated in Column 40, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed a virtually identical version of the bill (S 830) by voice vote on November 6, 1967.

EXPORT-IMPORT BANK: On February 7, 1968, when considering HR 6649 (to extend the Export-Import Bank), the House rejected an amendment which would have reduced by $1 billion the $4.5 billion increase in the bank's lending authority, as provided by the bill. This vote is tabulated in Column 43, C indicating a conservative stand for the amendment which would have reduced by $1 billion the commitment of taxpayers' money.

On February 7, the House passed HR 6649, extending the life of the Export-Import Bank for another five years, increasing its loan limit from $9 billion to $13.5 billion, prohibiting the bank from granting credit to any nation in armed conflict with the United States or to any nation which "by direct governmental action" furnished supplies or advisers to nations at war with the U.S. The vote is tabulated in Column 44, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed this bill by voice vote on August 11, 1967.

FIRE RESEARCH AND SAFETY ACT: On February 8, 1968, the House passed HR 11284, the Fire Research and Safety Act, establishing a 20-member National Commission on Fire Prevention and Control; authorizing $5 million for the Bureau of Standards to conduct (or contract for) research on the causes of fire and means of reducing fire losses, and for the Secretary of Commerce to conduct training programs for fire fighters. The vote is tabulated in Column 47, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed its version of this bill (S 1124) by voice vote on August 16, 1967. The House accepted the Senate version.

GOLD COVER: On February 21, 1968, the House passed HR 14743, removing the "gold cover" for American paper currency. Specifically, the bill eliminated the requirement that Federal Reserve Banks maintain U. S. Treasury gold certificate reserves to cover 25% of all Federal Reserve notes (paper money) in circulation. The vote is tabulated in Column 48, C indicating a conservative stand against.

The Senate passed HR 14743 on March 15, 1968.
